

Matthew Noyes
Strategy Director,
Office of Investigations,
United States Secret Service

Matt Noyes is the Strategy Director of the Office of Investigations, where he is responsible for leading the development of policy, strategy, planning, and budget for the Secret Service's over 160 field offices and over 3,100 agents and professional staff that execute the U.S. Secret Service's integrated mission of safeguarding the integrity of financial systems and protecting of designated persons, location, and events. He joined the Secret Service in 2012, and served in several positions at the Secret Service focusing primarily on budget and policy for strengthening the Secret Service's ability to counter risks posed transnational cyber crime.

Prior to the Secret Service, Mr. Noyes served as an infantry officer in the U.S. Army assigned to brigade combat teams. His military awards include the Bronze Star Medal and the Combat Infantryman Badge. He continues to serve as an officer in the U.S. Army Reserve. Mr. Noyes regularly writes, teaches, and presents on subjects at the intersection of technology and security policy. He has a master in public policy from the Harvard Kennedy School, a master of military art and science from the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, and a bachelor's degree in computer science and applied mathematics from the University of Washington.