

BIOGRAPHY OF TODD M. KOSSOW

Todd M. Kossow is the Director of the Federal Trade Commission's Midwest Region in Chicago, which is responsible for eleven midwestern states. Todd joined the FTC in 1998 and served as the Midwest Region's Assistant Director from May 2008 to January 2016, when he became the office's Director. During his tenure, Todd has litigated and supervised consumer protection cases in federal district court against companies and individuals involved in the deceptive marketing and sale of a variety of products and services, including money transfer services, tax relief services, mortgage relief services, and buyer's and travel club memberships. Before joining the FTC, Todd clerked for Judge Ilana Diamond Rovner on the federal district court in Chicago and then on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit. Todd graduated with honors from Northwestern University School of Law and from Wittenberg University.
